Sa Die De Sa Sardigna

This day commemorates the 're-awakening' of the Sardinian people when they revolted on 28 April 1794 against the domination of Piedmont in Sardinia by forcing the expulsion of the Piedmontese Viceroy, Balbiano, from Sardinia

The revolt was spurred by the refusal of the King, based in Turin, to reinstate the basic rights of the people of Sardinia which had been previously guaranteed by Treaty.

Since 14 September 1993 when the parliament of the Autonomous Region of Sardinia passed a law formally recognising the day, Sardinians all over the world go together to celebrate 'Sa Die De Sa Sardigna'

Sardinians are proud of their history, language and culture and on this day celebrate the richness of their heritage which has survived and flourished, perhaps despite their struggles, under the domination of the many foreign invaders who were presented on the island through the centuries, attracted particularly by Sardinians' natural resources and strategic position.

This special day means not only remembering the past but getting together with family, friends, Sardinians and lovers of Sardinia and to be grateful for the richness Sardinians has contributed to our lives.
